

TERM PAPER WRITING CONVENTIONS: BACHELOR'S DEGREE STUDY PROGRAMME
ENGLISH, EUROPEAN LANGUAGES AND BUSINESS
STUDIES
PROCESS OF WRITING

Writing a term paper prepares you for writing a Bachelor's Thesis. The term paper is written in English, with a theme falling within one of the following fields:

- ❖ English Language (Phonetics, Morphology, Grammar, Syntax, etc.)
- ❖ English Language Acquisition
- ❖ English Language Use in Communication
- ❖ Literature in the English Language (only for students in English Language and English-Scandinavian Languages modules)
- ❖ Cultural Studies
- ❖ Translation and Interpreting

The list of themes is available at the programme coordinator's at the beginning of September/February, but you may propose your own theme. The proposed theme must be discussed with a potential advisor and approved by the end of June.

The process of writing the term paper comprises several stages, namely:

1. Choosing the theme of the term paper and contacting the advisor.
2. Discussing the contents with the advisor and approving the plan.
3. Submitting the theoretical part of the term paper to the advisor.
4. Submitting the first draft to the advisor.
5. Uploading the final copy in e-studies.
6. Defending the term paper.

Each stage has to meet the deadline specified at <https://www.hzf.lu.lv/en/studies/research-papers/>, and it is your responsibility to plan the work, search for relevant literature, organise and edit the term paper according to these Conventions. We advise that you keep a copy of every submitted draft of your term paper.

ORIGINALITY AND AVOIDING PLAGIARISM

The term paper aims at extending your expertise with the knowledge gained in the process of your independent research, and, as such, the term paper should be an original synthesis based on the interpretation of the collected data.

To avoid plagiarism, any theories, ideas and data used in your research have to be duly acknowledged with references (see the section on references below). Unacknowledged sources amount to plagiarism, and detected plagiarism severely affects the assessment of the term paper and may even lead to the requirement to start a new term paper.

Always check with the advisor for what purpose you are permitted to use AI in your research. The use of the artificial intelligence tool has to be cited in the paper to avoid academic misconduct. You have to cite any AI tool (e.g. Chat GPT), writing assistant (e.g. Grammarly) or any other digital tool (e.g. NVivo, Voyant, English Corpora) which has been used in writing your paper for generating ideas, paraphrasing, summarising, translating, editing, collecting and analysing data

LENGTH OF THE TERM PAPER

The volume of the term paper is from 8,000 to 10,000 words, with the word count indicated at the end of the theses. The limits of length include the introduction, chapters, conclusions and theses, but exclude the acknowledgements, anotācija, abstract, list of abbreviations and acronyms, list of references and appendices.

INFORMED CONSENT

If your research involves participants, e.g. respondents in interviews and questionnaires or students in pilot teaching, informed consent in a written form has to be obtained BEFORE starting any research activities. The following steps should be taken to obtain it:

- 1) A free-form application to the programme director and the academic advisor is filed out with a request to grant permission to start research activities that involve the research participants.
- 2) An informed consent statement should be placed either in the introductory section of the questionnaire or on a separate participant information sheet.
- 3) Informed consent requires researchers to ensure the following factors:
 - a) when participants or their guardians give their formal consent, they are aware of the nature and the aim of the research,

- b) they are aware of how the data they have provided will be used and shared.
- 4) Informed consent should also include information about:
 - a) whether the data will or will not be anonymized,
 - b) how the data will be protected from theft and misuse,
 - c) how present or future researchers might apply the data.
- 5) If your research involves the collection of research participants' personal data, additional consent for such data processing is to be obtained. This type of information is provided in the form of a written participant information sheet along with a consent form to be signed to stipulate the research participants' agreement has been reached.

See Appendix 4.

STRUCTURE OF THE TERM PAPER

The term paper comprises:

- ❖ Title Page (see Appendix 1)
- ❖ Acknowledgements (optional)
- ❖ Declaration of Academic Integrity (see Appendix 2)
- ❖ Anotācija
- ❖ Abstract
- ❖ List of Abbreviations and Acronyms (optional)
- ❖ Contents (see Appendix 3)
- ❖ Introduction
- ❖ Chapters
- ❖ Conclusions
- ❖ Theses
- ❖ References
- ❖ Glossary (optional)
- ❖ Appendices

ABSTRACT / ANOTĀCIJA

The length of the abstract does not exceed 850 characters with spaces. Anotācija is a precise translation of the abstract.

The one-paragraph abstract comprises:

- ❖ background of the research or its topicality
- ❖ research goal
- ❖ research methods
- ❖ main results and conclusions

The abstract is followed by 4-8 key words, which are words or phrases representing the main concepts of your research. For example,

Key words: essay writing, argumentative essays, coherence, organisational patterns

CONTENTS

The table of contents is designed automatically (see Appendix 3).

INTRODUCTION

The introduction comprises the following information:

- ❖ a statement of the problem and importance of the theme
- ❖ a brief comment on previous research on the theme
- ❖ the goal of the research (specific, not general)
- ❖ research questions or the hypothesis derived from the goal

Note: The proposed hypothesis should not be axiomatic, i.e., self-evident and in no need of proof or explanation.

- ❖ enabling objectives or tasks to achieve the research goal that comprise but are not limited to:

1. to read and analyse theories / theoretical literature on ... (name them)
2. to apply the developed theoretical framework to ... (state the research goal)
3. to implement ... (state the necessary research activities to achieve the goal, e.g., to analyse metaphors in the chosen articles, to design a test, etc.)
4. to draw conclusions

- ❖ research methods:

- theoretical research method(s), e.g., analysis of theories
- empirical research method(s), e.g., discourse analysis, genre analysis, stylistic analysis, etc. and data collection technique(s) or tool(s) (if used), e.g., tests, interviews

- ❖ main scholars whose theories are used in the research
- ❖ a short summary (1-2 sentences) of each chapter

Note: A well-structured introduction ensures good reception of the paper!

CHAPTERS

The body of the paper presents a literature review and empirical research, and it is organised in chapters and subchapters, each provided a heading. The aim of the literature review is to demonstrate your knowledge of the previous research on the theme and to provide theoretical background for addressing your own researched problem. The empirical part comprises the methodology section including the description of the selected research method(s), description of participants (if applicable), data collection tools and/or collected data (corpus), research procedure as well as sections on the obtained results and their discussion. The theoretical part is one third, while the empirical part is two thirds of the body of the paper. Each chapter starts with a paragraph long introduction and concludes with a paragraph that briefly summarises the findings of the chapters and draws conclusions. To create a strong link to the next chapter, a transitional paragraph can be added.

Depending on the theme, the term paper should be based on 15 theoretical sources. Theories are taken from well-known books in the field. The length of the corpus for analysis depends on the research method and is suggested below.

Linguistics

Method	Amount
Text/ discourse, stylistic analysis a.o.	From 5,000 words (to be approved by the advisor)
Genre analysis	From 10,000 words (to be approved by the advisor)
Quantitative and qualitative analysis of linguistic units in available corpora	To be approved by the advisor
Word count to analyse the aspects of pronunciation when doing text self-transcription	From 1,000 words (to be approved by the advisor)
Language learning (surveys, testing a.o.)	To be approved by the advisor

Literature and Culture Studies

Method	Amount TP
Interpretation, comparative analysis, close reading, literary text analysis	At least 2 stories, or 1 novel, or at least 10 poems (to be approved by the advisor)

CONCLUSIONS

This section restates the research goal, generalises on the main findings of the theoretical and empirical investigation, describes practical implications, outlines limitations of the study, and sets directions for future research.

THESES

Theses are the most significant theoretical and empirical findings presented in brief and general statements. A regular term paper requires seven to twelve theses.

REFERENCES

The list of references lists all the sources – books, scientific papers, journal articles, etc. – used and referred to in the BA thesis. The entries on the list are numbered and arranged in alphabetical order, first listing references in Latin characters, followed by titles in Cyrillic characters.

To ensure research transparency, all in-text citations contain page numbers (if available) and all links of online sources (books, journal articles, etc.) are cited in the list of references and are available.

Unauthorised websites as well as websites that can be altered by anyone and not protected by copyright are put on a separately numbered list of Online sources. They are not viewed as reliable theories.

GLOSSARY (optional)

Glossary may contain definitions of the key terms. It is given only when the term is:

- ❖ often used ambiguously in the research area
- ❖ too general and needs to be specified

APPENDIX/APPENDICES (optional)

Appendices include materials relevant to the research but too voluminous to appear in the body of the BA thesis, such as, for example, text corpora, questionnaires, used or designed language acquisition materials, visual aids, less important tables and figures, and other kinds of illustrative materials. Appendices are provided with appropriate headings and numbered, for example,

Appendix 1: Lesson Plan

14. ATTESTATION PAGE (Dokumentārā lapa) (see Appendix 5)

FORMATTING

The text is formatted according to the following requirements:

- ❖ A4 paper, 2.0 cm top, bottom, and right margins, and 3.0 cm left margin
- ❖ main text: Times New Roman, 12 pt. regular, aligned left, indent 1.5 cm (except the first paragraph), 1.5 spaced, no extra space between paragraphs
- ❖ headings: Times New Roman, 14 pt. bold, centred, title case
- ❖ subheadings: Times New Roman, 12 pt. bold, aligned left, sentence case
- ❖ long quotations: Times New Roman, 12 pt. regular, single spaced, 1-cm indented
- ❖ captions and text of tables and figures: Times New Roman, 11 pt. regular, single spaced
- ❖ footnotes (better avoided): Times New Roman, 10 pt. regular
- ❖ page numbers: Times New Roman, 12 pt. regular, centred (see Appendix 4). The numbering starts with the list of abbreviations and acronyms (if any) or the introduction.
- ❖ if required, printed single sided

Chapters and subchapters

Each chapter starts on a new page and contains at least two subchapters, if used. Headings are written in title case and subheadings in sentence case, both in bold and without a full stop at the end. Subchapters do not start on a new page, but an empty line is left before and after each subheading.

Abbreviations and acronyms

The first time an abbreviation or an acronym is used, the term is spelt out in full, with the abbreviation/acronym shown in brackets immediately afterwards, e.g., English for Specific Purposes (ESP). Further on, only the abbreviation/acronym is used.

Tables and figures

Tables are referred to as Tables, while anything pictorial (be it a graph or a photograph) is called a Figure. Tables and figures are similarly numbered by chapter and with no reference to subchapters. Thus, the first figure (even if it is the only one) in chapter two will be Figure 2.1, the first table in chapter two – Table 2.1, the second table – Table 2.2, and so on. If the fourth table/figure is inserted in subchapter 3.1.1, it will still be Table 3.4 / Figure 3.4.

In-text citations

To ensure research transparency, page numbers are always used in in-text citations when quoting, paraphrasing or summarising. If an online source does not have page numbers, n. p. (i.e. no pages) is used.

- ❖ Quoting, paraphrasing and summarising words or ideas, the author(s)'s surname(s), the year of publication and the page number(s) are credited, e.g.,
 - ‘The study of “speaker meaning” is called pragmatics’ (Yule, 1996: 3).
 - ‘[...] “All my books investigate the end of Eden and the possibility of its reconstruction”’ (Doucornet, 1999: 3, quoted in Trendel, 2013: 106).
 - ‘The learners’ results, rather than being limited to a numeric grade, provide meaningful feedback and promote learning’ (Brown and Hudson, 1998, discussed in Czura, 2013: 22).
- ❖ If there are more than three authors, all their names appear when a reference to the source is made for the first time. Then, only the first author is mentioned followed by et al., for example, (Ding et al., 2018).
- ❖ If a reference is made to two different items by the same author in the same year, a or b is added to the year, for example, (Ellis, 2002a, 2002b).
- ❖ If more than one source is cited, they are placed in chronological rather than alphabetical order.

A number of research studies have been conducted into the effect of motivation on language acquisition (Smith, 1995; Brown, 1997; Anderson, 2002).

If more than one work by the same author is cited, the name is followed by all years of their publications, for example, (Ellis, 1998, 2011).

- ❖ If a quotation is translated, the translator's name is mentioned in brackets (e.g., translated by Ozols). If the translation is done by you, write ‘transl. mine’ instead.
 - ❖ If there is no publishing date, n. d. is written instead of the year, for example, (Brown, n. d.: 5).
 - ❖ If reference is to the whole work, a page number is not necessary.
- Stern (1983) argues that the language user knows the rules governing his native language.
- ❖ If a reference to a course book is made in the body of the text and its title is long, then the first three words are cited which are followed by three dots.

When a literary work is first introduced in the text, the title and the author are mentioned, but the publication date may be omitted. Referring to the book under analysis, only page numbers are used.

- ❖ For a text produced by an organisation, the name of the organisation (the corporate author) is used instead of the author's surname, for example, (Ministry of Education and Science, 2021).
- ❖ If the author of a video/audio recording is not known, the title and the year of release are cited.

World in Action (2002) depicts ...

- ❖ The beginning of the exact scene is indicated by adding minutes and seconds. 'Mrs. Bennet: You should have seen how handsome and elegant he is!' (Pride and Prejudice, 1940: 5' 02").

- ❖ Short quotations are incorporated into the text.

According to Jordan, 'It is important to acknowledge the source of the quotations; otherwise, you may be accused of plagiarism' (Jordan, 2001: 98).

Note: When quoting, single quotation marks are used. When the quoted material contains yet another quotation, the second quotation is enclosed in double quotation marks, e.g., Bach and Harnish (1982: 188) argue that "“speak colloquially” is almost as empty as “speak idiomatically” is obscure if it has nothing to do with using idioms’.

- ❖ Longer quotations (more than three lines in length) are set out separately. They are single-spaced and indented from the left-hand margin by 1 cm and written without any quotation marks, e.g.,

Jordan considers that the main features [italics added] of academic writing are as follows: it is formal in an impersonal [...] style (often using impersonal pronouns and phrases and passive verb forms); cautious language [may, might, would, can, could, seem, appear a. o.] is frequently used in reporting research and making claims. (Jordan, 2000: 88)

- ❖ To add words to an original quotation, square brackets are used. An ellipsis in square brackets, i.e. [...], is used to show that part of the quotation has been omitted.
- ❖ To refer to a website without the author and the title, the word Online and the source number in the order of its appearance in the text is used; for example,

A number of research studies have been conducted into the effect of motivation on language acquisition (Online 3).

- ❖ To refer to a website with an author, but no page numbers, n.p. is written instead of the page numbers, for example, (Brown, 2010: n.p.), (Brown, n.d.: n.p).
- ❖ When citing an e-book (either on an e-reader like the Kindle or online in an e-book format like epub), please use page numbers where available. If the book does not use page numbers, please use the chapter number or paragraph number, or a combination thereof.
- ❖ In-text citation: (author, year: page number) or (author, year: chapter number, paragraph number) (Goodwin, 2022: 146) or (Lowry, 2018: ch. 10, para. 37)
- ❖ ibid. is used to avoid repeating the author's or source name if the same page of the same source is referred to several times in a row; for example,

Quotations are the exact words of the author, which are accurate, with the same punctuation and spelling (ibid.).

Note: If the page number is different, it is added as in, for example, (ibid.: 1-2).

- ❖ In order to cite the analysed texts, acronyms may be used after they are properly introduced; for example,

Thirty articles (henceforth As) were chosen for analysis. The volume of A1 and A2 was....

- ❖ Similarly, all sample sentences are introduced first; for example,

As shown in Example 1 (henceforth E1), the link verbs were used most frequently (15 instances out of 30) in the present simple tense:

[1] She 's a very charming and pretty girl. (A10)

- ❖ To highlight key words in samples or terms in a text, italics is used. The whole sample sentence is not italicised – only the key words.
